The Hebrew and Greek way of assembling

A black and white illustration of a large assembly of people in ancient attire, possibly a Greek or Roman forum, with a speaker at the front. The scene is set in a large, open-air building with a curved walkway and a speaker at the front. The people are dressed in long, flowing robes and are gathered in a semi-circle, listening to the speaker. The background shows a large, classical building with columns and a dome.

The Hebrew and Greek word for assembly mean the same thing.

- to leave their tents/habitation.
- to summon, assemble or congregate as freed citizens.
- to listen and determine
- to act on behalf of God and the state.

TERRITORIES

A silhouette of a construction worker wearing a hard hat and a tool belt, standing on a wooden structure under construction. The worker is holding a tool, possibly a hammer, and appears to be working on the structure. The background is a gradient of colors from dark blue at the top to orange at the bottom, suggesting a sunset or sunrise. The overall scene is a metaphor for building a nation.

As part of the Lord's nation building programme, men are commissioned to build regional theocratic governments assembled by freed citizens whose sole duty is to legislate his divinity and sovereignty.
